

SAN FRANCISCO.

A Second Public Meeting.

The meeting on Thursday evening, which was convened at the public room of Capt. Dennison's Hotel, drew together a very considerable concourse of people. We are not informed—and we believe that the Public is not informed—of the source from which the call for the meeting purporting to assemble the Democrats of our city emanated, nor by what authority it was put forth. We have not seen the call itself, but we understand that it bore no signatures. To these circumstances—circumstances altogether natural, certainly, while all the regular means of party organization are wanting, and while almost the whole of our community are at this juncture opposed to such an organization as at once impracticable and undesirable—to these circumstances we say, it was probably owing that so large a number of the gentlemen who had without distinction of party, signed the call of the previous meeting of those citizens friendly to the election of Mr. King, were also present either as actors or spectators upon this occasion, and in some instances at least even participated we believe in the organization of the assembly.

Some of the management attendant upon the calling of the People together might perhaps have been more creditably omitted. The transparency over the door was very well and very proper; but the beating of the kettle drum on the portico might have been better spared. It surely was not in good taste in itself, and if the Democracy as a party were ready to assemble and felt that they had genuine party business before them to transact, it surely was unnecessary. It was a literal and open drumming up which we should be very sorry to have it understood, that the Democracy of California are in want of.

The proceedings of the meeting, however, were marked by good order and decorum. As soon as the organization was completed by the selection of the President, (Col. Geary), the Vice Presidents, and the recording officers, on motion of Col. Stevenson, we believe, the meeting adjourned to the Square. This movement probably somewhat thinned the attendance, for as the people left the Hotel, we observed that many turned away, instead of going to the new stand in the open air. It is not unlikely that the same circumstance may have somewhat chilled the feeling with which a portion at least of the audience were supposed to have assembled, for though there was little or no dissent to the proceedings which followed, there was certainly still less evidence of any general enthusiasm. Indeed, we think that no intelligent man could have attended the meeting as a spectator, without feeling the strong conviction that the time for any party organization, as such, of the people of San Francisco, and much more of California, has not yet come. That time may come hereafter—but it has not come yet, and it is every way undesirable that any personal aspirations or manoeuvres should attempt unduly to hasten it.

Having heard the proceedings of the meeting quite imperfectly, we cannot undertake to pronounce any positive opinion concerning them until we see them in print. What we heard of the well-spoken, general remarks, with which Mr. Voorhees introduced the Address, seemed to us to be such, in the main, as candid and moderate men, of all parties, would assent to. The Address itself appeared to us to be handsomely written; but we were surprised to perceive that, though it was adopted without amendment, as the authentic expression of a meeting which had, in some quarters, certainly been designed to be a party meeting, and which was so in name at least, it contained no Party Platform whatever. We were still more surprised, and by no means so agreeably surprised, to perceive that an Address so elaborately prepared for a public political meeting of Californians, should have attempted no mention or enumeration of the great measures which California will soon be so imperatively called on, without regard to party issues, to ask and to obtain at the hands of Congress. This struck us as a very strange omission, to say the least of it, and standing by itself, it would seem to indicate that personal, rather than political, or even partisan motives, had much to do with the origin of the meeting. And this view of the matter will certainly be strengthened, if our impression shall turn out to be correct that the Address does not even contain any statement whatever of a party creed. In explanation of this last omission, however, it may doubtless be well urged that no sound democratic creed could well have been submitted to the meeting, which any organized party in California would, in our present circumstances, rally, as a party, to oppose. But we reserve any further remarks upon the Address until we have it before us.

The meeting was addressed by three gentlemen, Mr. Rogers, (we believe), Mr. Randolph and Mr. Botts. Mr. Randolph spoke with energy and effect. Mr. Botts did not ourselves hear, but we learn that his remarks in derogation of Mr. King's public position and services, were feeble and not well received. A resolution was adopted instructing the President to name to the meeting a Committee of eleven, to make nominations and to submit them to the assembly when it shall again convene, on Saturday evening. The degree of unanimity with which these nominations shall be received by the meeting will tend to show how far more personal objects, and how far, on the other hand, genuine partisan objects were concerned in getting it up.

Partisan.

"One of the People," whose third number we publish to-day, yields a fluent and agreeable pen. When he has any good case to state he states it well and forcibly. But in undertaking to argue as he does in this communication, that because the democratic policy is a good policy and the democratic party is a good party, therefore the citizens of California ought forthwith, and at this very moment, to quit all other business if need be, and go straight to work in a manifestly ineffectual attempt to form a strict party organization, upon old and by-gone party issues between this and the 13th of November; in arguing in this way, we say, "One of the People" has no case at all to state, and so he fails. We publish his communication only to point out its errors in this respect, making of course no objection to his remarks upon party in general, which remarks have in fact nothing whatever to do with the question in hand.

If it is utterly impossible for any party in California to bring out its strength—or any show of its strength—in the election which is to take place in little more than a fortnight. This thing could not be done, however desirable it might be, and nobody knows this better than "One of the People." We shall do well and do much, if within that time we can spread the news through the great inland and mining districts, that there is to be an Election, let alone its partisan character.

In the next place the People in California, as we understand the matter, want no such thing as a party organization on the old issues at this time, and they will no more even try to go into it than they went into it on the question of holding the Convention, or in the action of this Convention in framing the Constitution. The Convention—like a body of sensible men as they were—in framing the Constitution went on with the great business before them and let mere party politics alone, and the consequence is that they have done their work to the general satisfaction.

We go further. We say that if we, as Californians, having had so little opportunity to interchange political communication with each other through the various districts of our State, undertake, instead of selecting the best men to take up in a party organization the men who come before merely as shouting some old party cry the loudest, we run into the sure and inevitable danger of overlooking those real and practical and living public issues and interests which are before and upon which are of unspeakable importance to us. Let us have the right men to secure these; and then in due season we shall be ready to take our share on the right side in the politics of the nation with energy and effect.

In all the above remarks we have not even alluded to the utter and manifest impossibility of getting at any authentic and authoritative regular nominations throughout the State, by any party. Nor have we alluded to the entire and admitted absence of any attempt to organize any party here as an opposition party, to that policy which "One of the People" advocates. These facts however speak for themselves; and in our judgment they go to show clearly that there is at this time neither necessity nor opportunity, nor instrumentality, nor public motion for a party organization among us. We may resume the subject.

NUMBER III.

THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS: I only hope this communication may meet with the editorial favor accorded its immediate predecessor, but, whatever its reception, it is intended to be written in the same spirit. The opinions advanced are my honest and sincere convictions, and should they, unfortunately, conflict with those held by others, I can do no more than regret, if wrong, my inability to perceive the right.

Disguise it how we may; endeavor to cloak it under whatever specious pretext can be devised, there are, and always will be, antagonistic principles of public policy about which men will continue, as they have done heretofore, to hold antagonistic opinions. This has been the case "time whereof the memory of man runneth not to the contrary," and he can be esteemed little better than a dreamer who honestly believes, until humanity has grown more pure and perfect than in times past, that any other state of things can possibly exist. Indeed, as mankind are at present organized, a perfect and entire unanimity of opinion and intercommunion of sentiment are not only impracticable but really would be unnatural. Diverse opinions in respect to the same matter, however clear that matter may be, we may expect to be entertained by different minds. Upon public policy the history of our own government affords one amongst a thousand most forcible exemplifications of this fact. From the first step of its progress up to this very moment, scarcely a principle, or measure, or enactment of a grave public character but has met with its full share of strenuous opposition. No matter how correct the principle, it was none the less violently attacked; no matter how wise the measure, its defeat was none the less eagerly sought; and no matter how important the enactment, it was none the less energetically resisted. What has continually existed heretofore we may then reasonably conclude will exist hereafter, until, at least, some almost supernatural change, which I am unable to see has yet occurred, first "comes over the spirit of our dream." I have no hesitation, therefore, in declaring that California, entitled to much, is assuming greatly more than will be accorded her if she entertains for an instant the idea that her admission into the Union will produce a healing of the political differences and dissensions which have divided the people of the States from the time of the gallant old Thirteen down to the present; and she deceives herself if she believes that she can enter the arena where opposing combatants are battling for principles and espouse the cause of neither. It may be well enough, perhaps, to effect certain purposes to talk about calming the strife of party and hushing the voice of political dissension, but it will be found, I apprehend, quite another matter to accomplish it. For my own part I would seek to do nothing of the kind. This same party has started the despots of Europe from their thrones and roused their heretofore submissive subjects to a proper appreciation of their rights and a noble resistance of that impudent authority which impudently stamps the seal of "dei gratia" upon its assumptions; and this same party, too, has more than once sustained the welfare and protected the interests of our own loved land when the batteries of mistaken talent (to use the mildest epithet) were opened upon and the energies of misdirected genius warred against them. We may as well then buckle on the armor now, for just so surely as the admission of California into the Union is effected, just so surely will she be required to assume a definite position upon the great questions of national policy which are as much and distinctly at issue at this moment as they have at any time been, and the people of California may rely upon it that any other idea, to say the very least, purely visionary. Now comes up the suggestion made at the close of my last communication that, the course of policy to be pursued by California "shall be that of a liberal, extended, high-toned, democratic policy," and when I use the term democratic, I intend to convey a definite, distinct idea. It is that course of policy understood in the States and comprehended by the people—a course of policy which has with us, at home, continually resisted the establishment of monopolies, battled to unflinchingly the energies of commerce, struggled for an extension of the "area of freedom," fearlessly fought on for the unobtrusive many against the arrogant pretensions of an influential few, which, with the vigilance of a trusty sentinel, has paced before the portals of the Constitution to preserve it inviolable, and which, against an opposition at home scarcely less obstinate and determined than that of enemies or rivals abroad, maintained the honor of the country when assailed, and won for us a reputation as world-renowned as it is imperishable. If to sustain this policy to partisanship, then am I a partisan died in the wool, a partisan because I believe the principles of the party with which I am humbly identified are conducive to and promotive of the general interests and welfare of my country as well as the particular interests of my adopted home, and because I believe the destiny of California, if a proud one, can be wrought out upon no other. "The union of Californians for the sake of California" is a sentiment to which I cannot subscribe, but a union of Californians for the sake of the Union as well as herself, comes within the spirit of that "liberal, extended, high-toned, democratic policy" of which I am now, as I hope ever to be, an earnest, zealous advocate.

ONE OF THE PEOPLE.

PLACE OF MEETING.—The Committee appointed at the late public meeting of citizens friendly to the election of Mr. King to the Senate, have, we learn, entered into arrangements with the proprietors of the "Bella Union" for the use of their spacious Concert and Assembly room—which will comfortably accommodate 1200 persons—for a certain number of evenings previous to the coming election.

THE SENTENCE OF THE LATE NAVAL COURT MARTIAL.—We have received, but at too late an hour for publication in this morning's paper, a full account of the manner in which the solemn sentence of the late Court Martial was carried into effect, on board two of the U. S. ships on this station, by the public execution of two of the condemned. We shall publish all the papers, including Com. Jones' address, in our next sheet.

MAIL STEAMERS FROM CHAGRES TO THE UNITED STATES.—We are pleased to learn that the intercourse between Chagres and the most important cities of the United States is now established upon a sure and firm basis. The mail line of steamers for New Orleans, Havana, Charleston and New York despatch a steamer on the 23rd of each month, with the mail for those cities. Messrs. Ward & Co. are the agents for the line in this city.

THE PHILADELPHIA MINSTRELS.—Our citizens have been favored during the week, by the truly fascinating Concerts of the above band. They are eight in number, and their songs and instruments are well selected. Three times a week they give concerts, at the Belle Union Hall, entrance on Washington st. We would advise all lovers of fun to go and hear them.

DRUG STORE.—We understand that C. C. Richmond & Co. have just opened a splendid store of this description, with a large assortment of drugs and medicines, at the foot of Jackson street.

THE OVERLAND IMMIGRATION.—We have news from the plains by persons who crossed the Sierra Nevada on the 15th inst., having left the Missouri river on the 21st of June. This party came in the rear of the great spring emigration to California, and suffered from the loss of animals and outfits, because of the great scarcity of forage on all the travelled routes.

These persons represent that the emigration had about reached the foot of the mountains on the "Carson" route by the sink of Mary's river; and that near the summit of the range on this road, they met relief trains going forward to those who might need assistance. Most of the belated emigration was induced by representations on the way to take the "Lawson route," which diverges to the north, on the right, about 30 miles above the sink of Mary's river; but subsequent information says that they have taken the most difficult road, and will be from one to two weeks later arriving at the settlements.

There has been a great deal of trouble, loss and toil from losing teams &c. on the way, but the people were pretty well provided with provisions, and there were no particular maladies among them, with the exception of slight scorbutic symptoms among some teams.

We neglected to say above, that relief has also been sent to the Lawson route, and that there is no apprehension of any serious calamity befalling any person or party on that road.

On the 13th inst. it commenced snowing on the Sierra Nevada mountains, for the first time during this season. It fell to about the depth of eight inches.

Gen. John Wilson, of Mo., Navy Agent for this Port, with his family will be here in the course of two or three weeks. He has come over-land, and is most probably on this side of the mountains at present. He is a gentleman of high moral worth, and his residence in our community with his accomplished family, will be received as quite an acquisition to the social circle of this city.

[REPORTED FOR THE PACIFIC NEWS.]

BEFORE J. W. GEARY, ALCALDE.—INTERESTING DIVORCE CASE.—Eleanor Harmon vs. Jacob Harmon.—An interesting cause was tried before his Honor, Judge Geary, and a jury, on Tuesday last. The facts proved by the complainant, on which a divorce "a vinculo matrimonii" was brought, were the drunkenness and brutality of the husband, and that he had threatened and attempted personal violence towards his wife on divers occasions. The complainant claimed the custody of the children and one half of the community property. The defence set up was adultery and misconduct on the part of the wife. After occupying the entire day with the testimony and addresses of the counsel, the cause was finally submitted to the jury, who, after a consultation of five minutes, found on all the issues for the complainant. The Court will decree a divorce. M. T. O'Connor and James C. Holmes, Esqrs., appeared as counsel for complainant, and George Hyde and Benham, Esqrs., counsel for defendant.

THE HOSPITAL

OF SAN FRANCISCO.

W. H. STIVERS, M. D., Resident

J. F. THORP, M. D., Physicians.

Main entrance on the east or lower side of Stockton street, between Clay and Sacramento streets, south-west of and near the Post Office.

This establishment is composed of an extensive range of buildings recently erected, and formerly, in part, occupied for a Hospital by our fellow-citizen Dr. Melhado. Its arrangements are, in all respects, most commodious; on a scale, indeed, suited to the various and rapidly increasing wants of both citizens and strangers.

The position is one of the best that could be chosen—elevated, healthy, and easy of access, with excellent water, and commanding a fine view of the bay. There is also attached to the premises an elegant fitting up Bathing House, where cold, warm, hot and medicated baths may be had, at all hours. The Baths for the use of the public are entirely SEPARATE and DISTINCT from those devoted to patients. The Hospital of San Francisco is the first, and, in fact, the ONLY Institution established on the Pacific coast, on a broad, liberal and sure foundation. It is a refuge for the sick—a home for the invalid, where comfortable quarters, good nursing, watchful medical treatment, and suitable diet will do all that human effort can do to alleviate suffering and restore to health.

The Terms are placed on the most moderate basis, being in truth, about one-third to one-sixth less than the expenses necessarily encountered by the sick, under any other arrangement.

TERMS.

1st class, one in a single room, neatly furnished, $16.00 per day.

2d class, two in a room, neatly furnished, each $10.00 per day.

3d class, in wards, neatly furnished, each $5.00 per day.

In all surgical cases, and cases of Insanity, there will be an extra charge.
